

Boeing Jobs

There's something romantic about the early days of transportation. Steam trains, Model-T's, the Wright Brothers and Amelia Earhart. Founded in 1916 by William Boeing, Pacific Aero Products was an early player in the history of flight.

Early planes were made out of wood and the company based itself in Seattle to take advantage of local spruce forests. In the 20's, Boeing started an airline company which he later merged into the airline manufacturing company, taking the name United Aircraft and Transport Corporation. More mergers and acquisitions followed including Pratt & Whitney. In 1934 Congress passed the Air Mail Act which prohibited companies from manufacturing airplanes and running airlines under the same corporate umbrella and the company was broken up into three parts, one of which was Boeing Airplane Company. United Airlines and United Technologies are the other 2 surviving spin offs. After decades of innovation Boeing continues to be an innovator in aerospace technology. The 737, first introduced in 1967 and still being made today, is the best selling passenger aircraft ever. Boeing, a major contractor for the Apollo program, continues to play a strong role in space exploration with contracts for the international space station. While still maintaining a major presence in Seattle, Washington, the company headquarters is now located in Chicago, thanks to generous tax benefits used to lure the multi-billion dollar corporation to Illinois.

From tax accountant to structural engineer, Boeing offers a diverse selection of career paths. The company employs over 160,000 people from Seattle to Charleston and in over 70 countries in manufacturing, engineering, software design, corporate administration and hundreds of support positions.

Today on Hound there are 383 job listings for Boeing, not counting subsidiaries. Most job sites charge employers stiff fees to list job openings which restricts the number of listings. Hound is different - we bring you every opening a company has, which means you will find more listings here than anywhere else. With no banner ads or pop up ads, we bring you unbiased and complete results for your job search. Compare Hound to sites like Monster.com, which has 113 listings for Boeing sandwiched between random "featured jobs" and banner ads, and it's easy to see why Hound is the top choice for serious job seekers.

Boeing may have jobs available now. Click here to see them.