

Arkansas state government jobs

Introduction- Arkansas is located in the southern part of the U.S. The state shares its borders with six other states and is bordered on the east by the Mississippi River. A large number of global companies have their headquarters in the State. Arkansas also has several automobile part factories as well as a booming tourism industry.

Company History: The first ever European to set foot on Arkansas was Hernando De Soto, a Spanish explorer, in 1541. The state, along with the other parts of the Louisiana Territory was handed over to Spain in 1762. In order to encourage more settlers to come to the area, the governors offered no taxes and free land. The territory had 60,000 residents by 1836, enough for it to become a state. It was declared to be the 25th State after an acceptable constitution was written.

Arkansas entered the Civil War by deciding to secede from Union in May, 1861. For the next twenty five years, the state saw much recovery and growth. Cities, factories, farms and lumber mills all over the state were linked by railroads. Arkansas was called the “Land of Opportunity” even in 1875 in an active campaign to draw new residents to the state. After the Second World War, the state was in a drive to industrialize. This successfully helped balance agricultural and industrial production.

Firms in the state today produce a wide variety of items such as paper products, pulp, clothing, cosmetics, communication equipments, aircraft components, aluminum products and much more. In the last 500 years, the state has grown from being wilderness to a highly developed state with 2.5 million population.

Usual Openings: Arkansas State Government Jobs are available in a wide range of state agencies that provide deserving candidates with a highly stimulating work place, top of the line benefits package and ample opportunities for growth. Jobs with Arkansas State Government are available for seasoned professionals as well as for recent graduates.

Careers with the Arkansas State Government are available traditionally in the areas mentioned below:

- The Department of Justice
- Fire Retirement System
- Arkansas Local Police
- Arkansas State Police

-
- Office of Governor
  - The Department of Administration and Finance

Arkansas State Government Jobs also come with competitive pay packages and monetary rewards that are considered to be the best in the industry today.

Current Openings: Arkansas State Government Jobs require employees to constantly strive for the best and work in a challenging environment to achieve the overall agency goal. Employees receive a comprehensive package of benefits such as life insurance, medical insurance, retirement benefits, paid leaves and much more.

Given below are some of the Arkansas State Government Jobs currently available:

- Advisor
- Customer Service Representative
- Correctional Officer
- AGS Specialist, Arkansas Geological Survey
- Registered Nurse, the Department of Human Services
- Administrative Specialist, Rehabilitation Services