

Do You Like to Travel – 4 Careers Which Will Make You Happy

Many people love traveling and are unhappy with a regular 9 to 5 job. If you are looking for a little more adventure and change during your job, check out the following career ideas where travelling is part of the primary requirements:

1. Travel Nurse - The good news first: this position pays more than permanent nurses; plus, it will involve a lot of traveling which is paid by the company that hires you. You will also be entitled to some great perks such as furnished accommodation, travel stipend and plenty of adventure in your day-to-day work. For this you will have to enroll with companies that provide nurses on call.
2. Tour Guide - This is not a local tour guide, but the one which accompanies groups on their trips to various parts of the world. You could end up taking your group to Greece, Hawaii, Paris, Hollywood, Kenya and so on. For your services to be high in demand, your thirst for travel should be matched by your skill of connecting to people. Also, knowing at 1-2 global languages such as French or German will help. In this job you not only get to travel the world over, but also learn so much about various places.
3. International Aid Worker - You may enroll with United Nations, USAID or the Peace Corps for this purpose. As an aid worker, your role is to make people's life a little easier with the expertise you have. Besides an inherent willingness to be of help to people who are less privileged, you also need to be adequately qualified for the job. Depending upon the field of your preference, you need to have a degree and certain level of expertise and experience. The salaries are good; but nothing compares to the satisfaction you get from knowing that you are making a difference in someone's life. Besides, you get to travel as much as you want.
4. Luxury Cruise Liner Crew - There are luxury cruising ships which go around the globe, such as Europe, the Caribbean, Africa and so on. You can get a job on these massive luxury liners and have all the fun in the world. There is a huge repertoire of jobs available comparable to hotel staff. There are stewardesses, radio operators, boutique managers, magicians, cooks, chefs, stewards, accountant, secretaries, and so on. Choose a job that suits your level of qualification and experience, and if accepted, you will be off on a trip of your own.
