

Some Interview Fashion Blunders You Must Avoid

Summary: First impressions might not be the last impressions but they do say a lot about you. It's really important to dress well when you go for an interview since what you wear will determine who you are and an interviewer will pay attention to your attire too.

Here are some handy interview tips that will help you get the interview attire right.

#1 - Understand the Organization - Your work attire will depend on the kind of organization you're planning to associate with. While there are a number of organizations that have taken on a casual approach, others still prefer the professional look. If you aren't sure about what the employees of a particular organization wear, it's best to stick to the professional dress code. Dressing in a professional manner is one of the safest ways to ensure you haven't goofed up the interview attire.

#2 - Dresses According To the Culture - There are a number of organizations that follow a dress code and a particular culture or trend. You will manage to figure out this information online via the company website, blog or online resources. This is also a great place for you to pick up various interview suggestions and tips that will help you score the job.

#3 - Don't Overdo it - There are a number of brave souls that love wearing a strong smelling perfume or cologne. While you might like the fragrance you're wearing, others might not. So try to use as little of it as you can to smell just right. Women should not wear too many accessories during an interview. Jazzy and loud outfits are something you should preserve for weddings; don't include these as part of your interview attire.

#4 - Keep It Subtle - Subtle outfits are classy as compared to the loud ones that grab more attention than required. If you're planning on scheduling a few interviews then it would be a good idea to invest in some appropriate interview attire since this will take you a long way. Apart from your clothes, ensure you have a classy pair of shoes that match. Women need to ensure they carry the right handbag.

#5 Dress By the Season - Yes, this does sound very weird, but it's true. You wouldn't want to attend an interview sweating in your suit during summer. If you've got to attend an interview in summer, opt for light colored clothes that will make you feel fresh and clean. Wear neatly ironed clothes that are crisp, clean and fit you perfectly. If the weather permits you could wear a blazer,

however always ensure you wear clothes that fit you right and you can carry off with confidence.
